Information about the personal data filing system

1. Name of the filing system

HR administration personal data filing system

2. Purpose of personal data processing

Taking care of HR administration and employment relationship affairs.

The data subjects in the filing system are persons with an authentic connection to the controller as employees, former employees or as persons working or having worked for the data controller by assignment, job applicant, student, intern or city official. Employee also refers to incumbents.

The City uses the data in the filing system when carrying out its tasks relating to the data subjects imposed on it by laws, collective agreements and separate decisions and regulations. The filing system is also used for recruiting personnel, supporting the internal mobility of personnel, maintaining the personnel's competence data, maintaining immunisation data, as a tool for employees and as a tool for personnel and information management. Basic data of employees can be processed also in the situations where the data needs to be transferred technically to a new information system to be deployed. Examples of the data to be transferred are name, job title and username.

12. Data protection principles

The storage, archiving, erasure and other processing of data is guided through archiving plans and data security and protection guidelines. Information stored electronically in the filing system is protected in such a way that only authorised people have access to it. Each user undertakes an obligation concerning the use and confidentiality of the data and information systems when receiving access rights. HR applications therefore do not have a form etc. which the recipient of access rights should accept.

As a rule:

- access rights are applied for
- the supervisor approves, in some cases also II level approval, e.g. main user
- access rights are added, not added or additional information is requested

Often, training is also required to be completed before granting access rights.
